

I believe that this is a great compromise to the CW issue facing amateur radio today. This suggested solution would ensure that operators of CW would be available in the future if needed given the excellent low power, high noise advantages of CW. It also would allow significant HF privileges for those who do not wish to learn the code. This may satisfy amateur operators on both sides of this debate.